The Caribaea Initiative NGO's primary mission is to contribute to the study and conservation of biodiversity in the Caribbean islands, through the development of scientific and technical skills at a regional scale. To this end, it offers a training workshop every two years for students and professionals eager to update their knowledge in the study and management of wildlife. The 2024 edition will focus on two main themes: the challenges related to the study of zoonoses in the context of the "One Health" approach, and the opportunities provided by modern techniques for remote monitoring of animal species (including data collection and analysis). The sessions will be led by several scientists and professionals specialized in both fields.

- Theme 1: €100
- Theme 2: €200
- Whole workshop: €270
(The price includes meals & coffee breaks)
